DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1, 2, 4-6, 10 and 11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Quain et al. ((GB Pat. No. 2,197,341)("Quain") in view of Masschelein et al. (Malting and Brewing Process)("Masschelein") and in further view of Dean, Jr., et al. (U.S. Pat. No. 4,978,616)("Dean") or Ripka (U.S. Pat. No. 4,764,471).

Applicants have amended the pending claims to include the limitation that the yeast slurry is "undiluted." While the instant specification provides basis for the limitation, it is not set forth how applicant obtain the yeast slurry. The claims recite that the instant slurry contains 40 to 80 gms per liter dry weight of yeast. Quain teaches that the slurry contains 200g of wet yeast were suspended in 2 liters of distilled water. The amount of dried yeast per liter would be something less than 100g/liter on the wet basis (rather than dry). The slurry is within applicants claimed range on a dry basis as wet yeast are high in moisture, the amount of yeast per liter would be, as previously stated, within applicant claimed range. Applicants state that slurries are diluted to avoid foaming. Applicants also avoid foaming. It is considered that applicant dilute the yeast at some point, it would be assumed prior to being placed in the tank.

It appears that the water concentration of the prior art slurries is the same as that claimed and disclosed and it would have been obvious to those of ordinary skill in the art to add the water at any point in the aeration process because selection of any order of performing process steps is prima facie obvious in the absence of new or unexpected results. In re Burhans, 154 F.2d 690, 69 USPQ 30 (CCPA 1946). Selection of any order of mixing ingredients is prima facie obvious. In re Gibson, 5 USPQ 230 (CCPA 1930).

Response to Arguments

Applicants' arguments filed 12/10/04 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. See response above.
